METAL FABRIC LATEST FOR DRESSY RAIMENT.

Next to the much in vogue black velvet made up with the new simplicity of a noticeable absence of frills, comes the metal fabric, the latest raiment for dressy wear. Glowing, shimmering almost like a thing alive and capable of feeling, this wonderful fabric is beautiful with a barbaic gorgeousness which differentiates it entirely from other materials in the present fashion world. All that has been most lovely for these last two thousand years seems somehow to have been consummated in this exquisite fabric. With the same run of every known shade, from the soft tones of grays and blues to the softer to the Roman gold, or even, sapphire, and flame, it is small wonder that it has stormed the fashion stage and left its impress on every woman's heart.

Women who cannot afford a whole gown of this material content themselves with a brief touch of it. In the vest of a coat or the belt of a gown, metal threads novelties of all kinds are being adopted. Hand woven designs of gold and silver, with tinsel of the same shade, are appearing with the new patterns, while the more bizarre the combination of silks used and the more unheard of the figures brooded on the soft material ground, the more unique and popular the gown. Probably the most striking patterns where an Ottoman background is splashed across with figures designed of gorgeous metal and silk that actually render the woman who wears them a "pillar of fire."

One evening gown which creates such comment here lately was of a black tulle having golden brown leaves that blended in perfectly with the amber background. An evening cape of the same metal fabric was of peacock blue velvet with raised cherry design on gold thread. Flowers of every imaginable and unimaginable variety are profusely scattered on the silk velvets. Gold and silver roses, with hearts of inky blackness, are seen on white satin carmesue. One handsome model of a velvet elaborately brocaded in a grape design in gold thread had a wide opening down the front finished with white ermine. The Russian coat was girdled in satin of the same shade, finished with a huge buckle of rhinestones and pearls and a sash set so as to show the hip drapery, which no longer narrows at the heels, but shows a fullness which is decidedly new.

BATHING FOR BEAUTY.

There can be no grace without elasticity, for elasticity is one of the secrets of beauty. The limbs, flesh, nerves, and brain must be elastic. Clamorous the body and limbs is not only invigorating to the muscles but is refreshing to the flesh, provided the attendant who does the shampooing gives instead of takes the patient's vitality.

The Turkish bath is an important adjunct to health. Just as perspiration and deep and effusive breathing are salutary to the skin, so also the hot air chambers and steam treatment of the Turkish bath eradicates from the organism impurities which threaten health and beauty. Great care is required in the choice of a masseuse. By no means retain a rubber whose magnetic forces are of a lower grade than your own. Select a strong, healthy masseuse, look at the size of her hands, select the one with the largest hands, and, if possible, one who has a smile on her face. Such a one at least will have no objection, giving you a thorough rubbing. Pass by the morose looking girl; her vitality is not strong; she will absorb your magnetism and give you none in return.

I cannot leave the subject of massage and bathing without touching upon the subject of unguents and their efficacy. That is, gaining health, nutrition and flesh texture, and tint by absorption. Take, for instance, a temperament to which all stimulants and fatty matter taken into the stomach are high deleterious. Nothing remains to build but the oil treatment, which consists of feeding the system through the pores of the skin and sebaceous glands. Olive oil, almond oil, and lanolin are used for this purpose. And for delicate, emaciated young girls there is nothing better than cod liver oil, objectionable as

I cannot clasp thy tender hand, The voice I cannot hear; Yet in my dreams, I see thy face Shine bright 'mid starlight clear, The clouds may hide from me thy sphere.

But still the link divine, Will bind my heart to thine; My heart, my heart to thine;

BOY MEETS BURGLAR IN HALVERSON HOME

While the family were all away from home yesterday afternoon, the residence of George Halverson was burglarized, the burglar securing $15 in cash, a watch valued at the same amount and a diamond clipped lock. That he did not secure more loot, was the fact that he was surprised by the sudden entrance of Spencer, the 8-year-old son of Mr. Halverson who was just returning from school.

The boy was severely frightened and before he could recover himself sufficiently to call the police, the burglar had escaped.

BURGLAR STOPS A NIGHT WATCHMAN

Henry Denkers, night watchman for the Boyle Furniture Co., while on his rounds at 11:30 last night, ran into an armed masked burglar. He was requested by the intruder to throw up his hands and to back into a side room and to remain there for fifteen minutes. He did so and when the fifteen minutes had elapsed he came out of the room and called the police.

The officers were quickly on the scene and made a thorough search of the building, but no trace of the burglar was found.

LINCOLN'S ADDRESS READ TO MILLION

Chicago, Ill., Nov. 19.—Abraham Lincoln's Gettysburg address which was delivered fifty years ago today near the close of the civil war, was read to the 1,000,000 pupils in the public schools of Illinois.

Pupils above the sixth grade had memorized the address and recited it at the hour at which President Lincoln began his speech. Tonight, the speech will be repeated in nearly every night school and social center in the state.

MRS. CRAMER DEFENDS HER HUSBAND

Chicago, Nov. 19.—Mrs. W. P. Cramer, whose husband was killed yesterday in Kansas City by Dr. W. T. Elam, said today that Cramer was the victim of a mistake on Dr. Elam's part. "I knew my husband's every thought," she said. "His conduct always was without blemish." James D. Sullivan, a friend of Cramer, said that Cramer had told him of meeting Mrs. Elam. "He told me of meeting her," said Sullivan. "He said they had a luncheon party and described her to me as a refined woman. He spoke of the affair as a pleasant and innocent little flirtation."

MODIFIED "FALLING OFF" DRAPERY.

This style of drapery persists in appearing in various forms on some of the best evening gowns, and, though considered extreme at first, it seems to be adaptable. Here a rich bronze metallic brocade, lined with soft blue messaline, is used. The slashes at the sides give a new effect and some of the fullness is caught by sprays of roses. The foundation slip is flesh pink trimmed with ribbon roses and blue velvet ribbon. Over it is draped a white lace tunic, held at the waist by a cream white satin sash with a gold and rhinestone buckle.
